In 1901 John William Hartley is farming at Kate Farm, Meathop. His wife Sarah Dobson came from Holme. She is one of the five children of William and Margaret Dobson living at 11 Church Street in Holme according to the 1881 census. William is a farmer and one of his farm servants is William H. Hoggarth, 16, born Manchester [this is possibly the son of George Hoggarth & Mary Hogg of Holme]. Sarah's grandfather, William, of Yealand, appeared in the Ulverston Advertiser for 27th March 1851 in a case of cows poisoned by Yew Tree leaves.
